ANTHRACITE MINERS ASK A WAGE INCREASE

20 PCT. INCREASE & OTHER DEMANDS AT THE CONFERENCE

SPECIAL ARBITRATION COMMITTEE MAY BE NAMED TO HANDLE MATTER

PRESENT CONTRACT EXPIRES AUG. 31, NATION'S EYES ON NEGOTIATIONS

"Brainerd," said William V. Turcotte of Turcotte Brothers, coal dealers, "is fast gaining the reputation of being one of the best towns in the state to buy its coal supplies early in the season. The movement in Brainerd for getting one's winter coal starts in July."

(By United Press)

Atlantic City, N. J., July 7.—A special arbitration committee will probably be appointed to handle the wage and other demands of anthracite miners, it was indicated today, when the joint union-operators' conference was resumed.

This committee, composed of four miners and four operators, would consider the merits of the eleven union demands, chief of which is a request for a 20 per cent wage increase.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the conference, indicated this course would be acceptable to the unions.

Lewis said every effort should be made to reach an agreement before calling in outsiders unfamiliar with conditions in the coal fields.

The present contract does not expire until August 31, and the committee would have until that time to draw up a new contract without precipitating a strike.

Adjournment of the conference for several days probably will be taken late this afternoon.

Mrs. Richner, accompanied by her brother, Harry Elder, of Indianapolis, appeared highly nervous as the court hearing opened. However, whn eher little 4-year old daughter climbed into her lap and carressed her, she regained her composure.

Capt. Charles F. Craig said that Mrs. Richner appeared one evening and asked for her husband. She was told he was in the bathroom.

"I heard the explosion of a small calibred revolver shortly after," Craig said, and then he heard a man scream, "that woman shot me."

Craig said the lieutenant died shortly after. He said he had heard no conversation previous to the shooting.

Private Lofton Crawford testified he heard a pistol shot and saw Mrs. Richner hand the revolver to an officer, saying "Get Richner. I have shot him."

Lieut. Wm. Miley testified that Mrs. Richner gave him the pistol, which had one cartridge exploded.

Three defense witnesses remain to be heard. After their testimony Judge McMullin was expected to charge the jury and arguments in the case begun after Chambers is in the jury box.

TOMMY GIBBONS, HERO OF SHELBY, ARRIVES IN ST. PAUL

GOVERNOR PREUS CAME IN OFF CAMPAIGN TOUR TO WELCOME HIM HOME

"I'LL DO BETTER NEXT TIME WHEN I MEET DEMPSEY," SAID GIBBONS

(By United Press)

St. Paul, July 7.—Tommy Gibbons, hero of Shelby's pine bowl, arrived home today. A crowd of about 10,000 cheered him as he stepped off a Great Northern train at the depot this morning.

Governor Preus came in off a campaign tour to welcome Tommy home. He boarded the train before it arrived, and followed Gibbons from his coach.

"I hope you will all vote for your great governor," said Gibbons, slapping the executive on the back.

After Gibbons and his family entered their automobile they were buried in a shower of flowers. A second crowd awaited Tommy at home, and he appeared to be somewhat embarrassed by the cheering throngs' demonstration.

His little speech to the crowd was inaudible, the crowd cheering him as he entered his automobile with his wife and three boys.

"I have learned everything about Dempsey and he has learned nothing about me," said Gibbons. "I know I'll do better next time, and I hope we meet again. If we do, it will be a different story."

They told me to be careful of Dempsey's left. I was watching it so closely that he battered me with his right in the first round, and it hurt me.

"Dempsey can't jab with his left while he is a mark for my left jab. I couldn't get my jab working right, or I would have outscored him.

"You tell the world that Jim Daugherty will never referee for me again. Every time he broke us he picked on me and set me back so that Dempsey could jump in. He didn't say anything about Dempsey's slapping, but when I accidentally slapped Dempsey with a backhand Dempsey warned me."

"Dempsey is easy to feint and easy to hit. He isn't the mankiller you have heard about. Billy Miske hits just as hard. The trouble with Dempsey's hitting is that you can see him coming. If he had been quick he would have knocked me out of the state."

Gibbons was motored to the town and country club for breakfast and then to Como Park where there was a big automobile parade. Crowds lined up at Central Park and the capitol, and a foot parade followed, winding its way through the cheering throngs to Rice Park at noon.

MOTHER OF 4 CHILDREN SHOOTS DOWN RIVAL

GARY PROMISES A SHORTER DAY IN REASONABLE TIME

STEEL MAN'S ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWS HARDING'S REVELATION

HAD TAKEN UP WORK WITH INDUSTRY CHIEFS TO CUT WORKERS' HOURS

New York, July 7.—Entrance into the United States of a labor supply from Mexico, the Philippines, Canada and a few European countries soon will make possible abolition of the 12 hour day in the steel industry, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, has announced.

Mr. Gary declared the 12 hour day would be abolished with in a reasonable length of time. As the supply of labor increases, he said, the long day gradually will be abolished, and he pointed out that the supply was now increasing.

He estimated that the change would require 60,000 additional employees and would increase the cost of finished steel products by 15 per cent.

Decision to bring about a speedy reduction in the length of the working day, Mr. Gary asserted, had been influenced greatly by public sentiment and by the presdient's declaration in its favor.

One of the most important factors in the increase of labor in the steel industry seen by Mr. Gary was the migration of Negroes from the south to the manufacturing centers of the north.

Tacoma, Wash., July 7.—President Harding made public here the correspondence between himself and the directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and in a statement incorporated as a part of his address here, said, "The large majority of the steel manufacturers of America have undertaken to abolish the 12-hour day in the American steel industry at the earliest moment that the additional labor required shall be available."

The letter to President Harding was signed by Elbert H. Gary, John A. Topping, W. A. Rogers, W. H. Donner, W. J. Filbert, E. A. S. Clark, James A. Farrell, E. G. Grace, Willis L. King, James A. Burden, L. E. Black, Severn P. Ker, J. A. Campbell, A. C. Dinkey and Charles M. Schwab, directors of the American Iron and Steel institute.

The letter follows:

"Careful consideration has been given to your letter of June 18 instant by the undersigned directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute comprising all those whose attendance could be secured at this time.

"Undoubtedly there is a strong sentiment throughout the country in favor of eliminating the 12-hour day and this we do not underestimate. On account of this sentiment and especially because it is in accordance with your own expressed views, we are determined to exert every effort at our command to obtain in the iron and steel industry of this country a total abolition of the 12-hour day at the earliest time practicable."

MISSING GIANT NAVAL ENTRY IS FOUND IN LAKE

COLLAPSED GAS BAG SIGHTED IN LAKE ERIE BY STEAMER, TUG SENT OUT

FEAR EXPRESSED THAT LIEUT. ROTH AND HULL, HIS AIDE, WERE DROWNED

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio, July 7.—A balloon believed to be the missing giant naval entry in the Indianapolis air race was found early today floating in Lake Erie 25 miles south by southwest of Fort Stanley, Ont., according to a message received here.

There was no sign of life, and the basket had sunk beneath the folds of the bag, which still contained a small amount of gas. As the lake at that point is 125 feet deep, fear was expresed that Lieut. L. J. Roth of Lakehurst, and Telford B. Hull, his aide, may have lost their lives in the water.

The bag was sighted by the quartermaster of the steamer Colonial. "We went off our course, circling the big bag twice," said the quartermaster. "We noted that the basket was submerged. We determined that we couldn't do any good, so went into Fort Stanley and sent for a tug."

The tug started immediately for the scene and will tow the bag to Fort Stanley.

The quartermaster said it would be impossible to determine if there are any bodies in the basket until the bag is towed into port.

NO WORD RECEIVED FROM LIEUT. ROTH

Indianapolis, July 7.—Word from Lieut. L. J. Roth, pilot of a naval balloon in the national elimination race, was awaited with anxiety here today.

The balloon was found in Lake Erie, collapsed, and it is feared that both he and his aide were lost.

BALLOON PASSES OVER ANN ARBOR, MICH.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 7.—Traveling at approximately 5,000 feet, a balloon passed over Ann Arbor just before dark last night.

The balloon's height prevented identification, but it was believed to be the craft of Lieut. L. J. Roth, only balloon in the national elimination race started at Indianapolis Wednesday which was still unaccounted for.

The balloon was traveling northwest at a speed of about 20 miles an hour.

RACE MANAGER THINKS ROTH HAS PERISHED

Indianapolis, July 7.—Fear that Lieut. L. J. Roth and Telford B. Hull, crew of the missing navy entry in the national balloon race, may have perished in Lake Erie during a storm, was expressed by B. C. McGrath, manager of the races, when told a balloon was found in the lake south-southwest of Fort Stanley, Ontario.

"All the other balloons have been definitely accounted for," said McGrath.

"It would seem that the balloon is that of Lieut. Roth."

Lieut. Olmstead, who landed at Marilla, N. Y., reported that Lieut. Roth was following him over the eastern end of Lake Erie when they encountered a violent thunder storm.

Olmstead said Roth's balloon caught the full fury of the storm and wa snot sighted again after the weather cleared.

H. E. Honeywell, St. Louis pilot, who landed at Brockton, N. Y., reached Indianapolis today and declared the storm was the worst he had ever encountered in 20 years of ballooning.

"We fought with the storm for several hours above Lake Erie before we got out of the center of it.

"I don't believe that any balloon could survive in a storm like that if it caught the full force of such elements.

Lieut. Roth was not very far behind us when we sighted him shortly before encountering the storm."

2 TUGS AIM TO TOW IN WRECK

Fort Stanley, Ont., July 7.—Two tugs left here shortly before noon in an effort to tow in the navy balloon reported to be floating in Lake Erie 25 miles south-southwest of here.

The balloon is believed to be the giant navy balloon which started in the air race last Wednesday at Indianapolis. Reports that the craft was still afloat were brought to Fort Stanley this morning by the steamer Colonial.

GERMANY WOULD NOT ADMIT RESPONSIBILITY

French and Belgians also demanded that the German government promise to seek out and arrest those who brought on the explosion.

3RD PARTY SEEMS EVERYTHING BUT A HARMONIOUS BODY

RUTHENBERG AND FOSTER, LIBERALS, "RAID" COALITION CONFERENCE

JOHN C. FITZPATRICK AND ROBERT W. BUCK LEAD THE CONSERVATIVES

(By United Press)

Chicago, July 7.—Hope of merging political minorities of the country into a harmonious third party faded today.

After C. E. Ruthenberg and William Z. Foster, liberals, supported by the "communistic" workers party, "raided" the coalition conference and organized the "Federated Farmer-Labor party" the conservatives of the Farmer-Labor party, who fathered the minorities merger idea, refused to join.

John C. Fitzpatrick and Robert W. Buck, Chicago, lead the conservative fight within the Farmer-Labor party conference today that ended in a vote repudiating the Federation.

This was after "liberal" leaders announced that delegates from a dozen states had bolted the Farmer-Labor party to join the Foster-Ruthenberg group. Chester C. Platte, Madison, Wis., declared that this desertion by the "communistic" group will strengthen the Farmer-Labor party.

Burden, L. E. Black, Severn P. Ker, J. A. Campbell, A. C. Dinkey and Charles M. Schwab, directors of the American Iron and Steel institute.

The letter follows:

"Careful consideration has been given to your letter of June 18 instant by the undersigned directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute comprising all those whose attendance could be secured at this time.

"Undoubtedly there is a strong sentiment throughout the country in favor of eliminating the 12-hour day and this we do not underestimate. On account of this sentiment and especially because it is in accordance with your own expressed views, we are determined to exert every effort at our command to obtain in the iron and steel industry of this country a total abolition of the 12-hour day at the earliest time practicable."

MISSING GIANT NAVAL ENTRY IS FOUND IN LAKE

COLLAPSED GAS BAG SIGHTED IN LAKE ERIE BY STEAMER, TUG SENT OUT

FEAR EXPRESSED THAT LIEUT. ROTH AND HULL, HIS AIDE, WERE DROWNED

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio, July 7.—A balloon believed to be the missing giant naval entry in the Indianapolis air race was found early today floating in Lake Erie 25 miles south by southwest of Fort Stanley, Ont., according to a message received here.

There was no sign of life, and the basket had sunk beneath the folds of the bag, which still contained a small amount of gas. As the lake at that point is 125 feet deep, fear was expresed that Lieut. L. J. Roth of Lakehurst, and Telford B. Hull, his aide, may have lost their lives in the water.

The bag was sighted by the quartermaster of the steamer Colonial. "We went off our course, circling the big bag twice," said the quartermaster. "We noted that the basket was submerged. We determined that we couldn't do any good, so went into Fort Stanley and sent for a tug."

The tug started immediately for the scene and will tow the bag to Fort Stanley.

The quartermaster said it would be impossible to determine if there are any bodies in the basket until the bag is towed into port.

NO WORD RECEIVED FROM LIEUT. ROTH

Indianapolis, July 7.—Word from Lieut. L. J. Roth, pilot of a naval balloon in the national elimination race, was awaited with anxiety here today.

The balloon was found in Lake Erie, collapsed, and it is feared that both he and his aide were lost.

BALLOON PASSES OVER ANN ARBOR, MICH.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 7.—Traveling at approximately 5,000 feet, a balloon passed over Ann Arbor just before dark last night.

The balloon's height prevented identification, but it was believed to be the craft of Lieut. L. J. Roth, only balloon in the national elimination race started at Indianapolis Wednesday which was still unaccounted for.

The balloon was traveling northwest at a speed of about 20 miles an hour.

RACE MANAGER THINKS ROTH HAS PERISHED

Indianapolis, July 7.—Fear that Lieut. L. J. Roth and Telford B. Hull, crew of the missing navy entry in the national balloon race, may have perished in Lake Erie during a storm, was expressed by B. C. McGrath, manager of the races, when told a balloon was found in the lake south-southwest of Fort Stanley, Ontario.

"All the other balloons have been definitely accounted for," said McGrath.

"It would seem that the balloon is that of Lieut. Roth."

Lieut. Olmstead, who landed at Marilla, N. Y., reported that Lieut. Roth was following him over the eastern end of Lake Erie when they encountered a violent thunder storm.

Olmstead said Roth's balloon caught the full fury of the storm and wa snot sighted again after the weather cleared.

H. E. Honeywell, St. Louis pilot, who landed at Brockton, N. Y., reached Indianapolis today and declared the storm was the worst he had ever encountered in 20 years of ballooning.

"We fought with the storm for several hours above Lake Erie before we got out of the center of it.

"I don't believe that any balloon could survive in a storm like that if it caught the full force of such elements.

Lieut. Roth was not very far behind us when we sighted him shortly before encountering the storm."

2 TUGS AIM TO TOW IN WRECK

Fort Stanley, Ont., July 7.—Two tugs left here shortly before noon in an effort to tow in the navy balloon reported to be floating in Lake Erie 25 miles south-southwest of here.

The balloon is believed to be the giant navy balloon which started in the air race last Wednesday at Indianapolis. Reports that the craft was still afloat were brought to Fort Stanley this morning by the steamer Colonial.

MYSTERIOUS DRAMA OF SEA INDICATED IN CRYPTIC TERMS

(By United Press)

Washington, July 7.—A mysterious tragedy of the sea was indicated in cryptic terms in a dispatch received today by the navy department from the coast guard cutter Tamarack.

The message stated that the fishing schooner Sybel had picked up several dories with men in them but gave no further information on the disaster.

GERMANY WOULD NOT ADMIT RESPONSIBILITY

Berlin, July 7.—Foreign Minister Baron von Rosenberg told France and Belgium today that Germany could not acept responsibility for the Duisberg bombing where nine Belgian soldiers were killed.

Germany does not admit that her citizens were responsible for the explosion and therefore cannot assume responsibility, he said.

Rosenberg's statement was made in answer to an official demand of Ruhr occupants that Germany publicly disapprove the explosion, it was announced officially.

French and Belgians also demanded that the German government promise to seek out and arrest those who brought on the explosion.

3RD PARTY SEEMS EVERYTHING BUT A HARMONIOUS BODY

RUTHENBERG AND FOSTER, LIBERALS, "RAID" COALITION CONFERENCE

JOHN C. FITZPATRICK AND ROBERT W. BUCK LEAD THE CONSERVATIVES

(By United Press)

Chicago, July 7.—Hope of merging political minorities of the country into a harmonious third party faded today.

After C. E. Ruthenberg and William Z. Foster, liberals, supported by the "communistic" workers party, "raided" the coalition conference and organized the "Federated Farmer-Labor party" the conservatives of the Farmer-Labor party, who fathered the minorities merger idea, refused to join.

John C. Fitzpatrick and Robert W. Buck, Chicago, lead the conservative fight within the Farmer-Labor party conference today that ended in a vote repudiating the Federation.

This was after "liberal" leaders announced that delegates from a dozen states had bolted the Farmer-Labor party to join the Foster-Ruthenberg group. Chester C. Platte, Madison, Wis., declared that this desertion by the "communistic" group will strengthen the Farmer-Labor party.

75 K. K. K. UP FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT

(By United Press)

Springfield, Ill., July 7.—Seventy-five Ku Klux Klansmen face trial here today charged with disorderly conduct.

The arrests were made on the basis of Judge Golden Davis' ruling that the appearance of three or more persons on the street masked would constitute disorderly conduct.

The Klansmen were thrown in jail as they were returning from the funeral of a fellow-member of the "Invisible Empire."

Hundreds of citizens cheered the prisoners as they were marched to the jail.

72 Plead Not Guilty

Springfield, O., July 7.—Seventy-two members of the Ku Klux Klan pleaded not guilty to charges of disorderly conduct here when arraigned in police court today.

Their hearing was set for July 26. The Klansmen were going through the streets last night after returning in full regalia from the funeral of a fellow-member. The arrests followed a ruling from Police Judge Golden C. Davis that the appearance of three or more masked persons in public constituted disorderly conduct.

(By United Press)

Chicago, July 7. —The Windsor Park golf links, purchased by J. Ogden Armour to serve as a campus for the Armour Institute of Technology, was sold by the institute today for $1,000,000.

The sale followed that of millions of dollars worth of packing stock owned by Armour, as well as "Gold Coast" property which the packer had purchased on which to erect a city home.

The campus was purchased by a New York firm, which will make it into a new residence suburb.

George Reddell, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, has also disposed of property near that owned by Armour interests.

He Knew Him When—

There is one Detroiter who had an opportunity to study at close range the new Japanese ambassador long before M. Hanihara thought he would represent his country in the United States. During the settling of the Russian-Japanese peace at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1905, Harry H. Cooper, of the Hotel Tuller, represented the Postal Telegraph company at the Kittery naval station. He had charge of all the Japanese official cable dispatches. M. Hanihara was the social and, virtually, the general secretary for the Japanese peace envoys. When correspondents wanted to know anything, they went to M. Hanihara, who, with the suavity characteristic of his race, did what he could. He and Mr. Cooper became good friends in the course of the negotiations.—Detroit News.

TRANSPORTATION A GREAT INDUSTRY

Second Only in the Nation to Agriculture, Which is the Basic Industry

ARE 265,000 MILES OF RAILWAY

Freight Moved in a Year, If Loaded In One String of Cars, Would Be 312,000 Miles Long

The following article embodies a paper read by W. H. Gemmell, president of the Minnesota & International railway, at a meeting of the Rotary Club.

The greatest industry in the nation today is Agriculture and the second greatest is that of Transportation. Without an adequate supply of the latter, the former would rapidly diminish to almost the vanishing point, and the same would be true of practically every other industry in the country.

Have you ever given much thought as to what private enterprise and private capital have given to the American people in the way of a transportation system? A recent article in the Geographic very graphically answers the question. They have caused the construction of 265,000 miles of railroad, enough to encircle the earth at its largest circumference more than eleven times.

And these railroads are the best railroads in the world and pay higher wages and transport freight and passengers for lower rates than any other railroads in the world with the possible exception of our neighbor, Canada, where I believe they are about on a parity with us as to wages and rates. Is not such a railroad system an asset of which any nation should be proud?

They have supplied these lines with locomotives and cars which if put into a single train would extend from the Cape of Good Hope, the farthest point in Africa, through Africa, across the Suez Canal, through Asia and Siberia across to Alaska, through Alaska and North America and the Panama Canal, into and through South America to a point in Chile within 1200 miles of Cape Horn, the southern most extremity of Patagonia.

If we could load the tremendous store of freight that moves over these railroads in a year's time into one string of cars it would be 312,000 miles long.

These railroads carry 1,175,000,000 passengers making 46,000,000,000 miles in a year. In its annual march around the sun the earth is about the speediest thing we know. It hurtles through space at so great a gait that it covers a distance equal to that which stretches between Ottawa, Canada and Tallahassee, Florida in a single minute, and yet even with such a speed record, it cannot pile up mileage as fast as the American people in their railroad travel Indeed if the earth were to speed up its gait eighty-fold, its annual mileage would no more than equal the miles covered by the travelers of the United States in a normal year.

An eastern Railway representative has recently stated to the charge that railroad management is inefficient and that the transportation systems have broken down, the railroads are furnishing complete refutation by the service which they are now rendering. Despite the obstacles placed in the way of efficient transportation service by the cumulative effect of the coal miners strike and the railway shopmen's strike of last year, the railroads during the 47 weeks between July 1, 1922 and May 26, 1923, handled the greatest volume of traffic ever transported in the history of the country during any corresponding period, the number of cars of revenue freight loaded during that time benig 2,708,881 greater than the greatest number ever loaded during any similar period. The verdict of history must be that despite its deficiencies and youthful sins and indiscretions the transportation part of the nation's business has been done fully as well, if not considerably better than any other.

An important meeting was held in Chicago a few weeks ago by a certain political group, which was participated in by the leaders of the Railway Labor Unions, at which time the valuation which the Interstate Commerce Commission was placing on the railroads was vigorously attacked.

The railways in 1922 earned $777,000,000 net operating income, which was almost $200,000,000 less than they earned for the owners of their securities in 1917, five years before.

On the other hand, the wages paid to railway employees in 1922 were $2,669,000,000, or $350,000,000 more than in 1917.

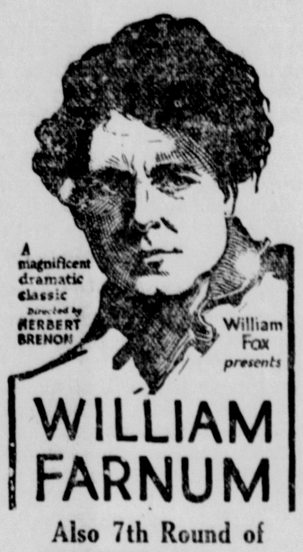

In view of the fact that railway labor in 1922 received almost a billion dollars more wages than in 1917, and that the investors in railways received almost two hundred million dollars less return the leaders of the railway labor unions certainly showed remarkable nerve in taking part in such a meeting held for the express purpose of making the public believe the net returns the railways are allowed to earn are responsible for the fact that rates higher than those charged five years ago must be maintained.

Is this great business now conducted by private enterprise to be continued by private enterprise or must it be turned over to the Government for government operation? If so, the deficits that will surely result from such operation must be met by taxation of the rich and poor and the users and non-users of railroad transportation alike.

This brings me to my main subject this afternoon which I have entitled "The Net Return."

If we could load the tremendous store of freight that moves over these railroads in a year's time into one string of cars it would be 312,000 miles long.

These railroads carry 1,175,000,000 passengers making 46,000,000,000 miles in a year. In its annual march around the sun the earth is about the speediest thing we know. It hurtles through space at so great a gait that it covers a distance equal to that which stretches between Ottawa, Canada and Tallahassee, Florida in a single minute, and yet even with such a speed record, it cannot pile up mileage as fast as the American people in their railroad travel Indeed if the earth were to speed up its gait eighty-fold, its annual mileage would no more than equal the miles covered by the travelers of the United States in a normal year.

An eastern Railway representative has recently stated to the charge that railroad management is inefficient and that the transportation systems have broken down, the railroads are furnishing complete refutation by the service which they are now rendering. Despite the onstacles placed in the way of efficient transportation service by the cumulative effect of the coal miners strike and the railway shopmen's strike of last year, the railroads during the 47 weeks between July 1, 1922 and May 26, 1923, handled the greatest volume of traffic ever transported in the history of the country during any corresponding period, the number of cars of revenue freight loaded during that time benig 2,708,881 greater than the greatest number ever loaded during any similar period. The verdict of history must be that despite its deficiencies and youthful sins and indiscretions the transportation part of the nation's business has been done fully as well, if not considerably better than any other.

An important meeting was held in Chicago a few weeks ago by a certain political group, which was participated in by the leaders of the Railway Labor Unions, at which time the valuation which the Interstate Commerce Commission was placing on the railroads was vigorously attacked.

The railways in 1922 earned $777,000,000 net operating income, which was almost $200,000,000 less than they earned for the owners of their securities in 1917, five years before.

On the other hand, the wages paid to railway employees in 1922 were $2,669,000,000, or $330,000,000 more than in 1917.

In view of the fact that railway labor in 1922 received almost a billion dollars more wages than in 1917, and that the investors in railways received almost two hundred million dollars less return the leaders of the railway labor unions certainly showed remarkable nerve in taking part in such a meeting held for the express purpose of making the public believe the net returns the railways are allowed to earn are responsible for the fact that rates higher than those charged five years ago must be maintained.

Is this great business now conducted by private enterprise to be continued by private enterprise or must it be turned over to the Government for government operation? If so, the deficits that will surely result from such operation must be met by taxation of the rich and poor and the users and non-users of railroad transportation alike.

This brings me to my main subject this afternoon which I have entitled "The Net Return."

PRESIDENT HARDING ASKS ANGLO-SAXON ACCORD

INDEPENDENCE DAY, 1923, witnessed a departure from the strict rules that have been observed in the past by two governments. On that day, upon invitation of the president of the United States, British marines and men of the British navy, bearing their sidearms, marched in a Fourth of July parade at Portland, Oregon. This incident carries a deep significance, because the laws of the United States prohibit the landing of armed forces in this country, while the laws of Britain require that any of her forces marching in any formal parade must be armed.

Significant as the event was in itself, what President Harding said when this landing of British armed forces took place, breaking a precedent of long standing, was much more significant. Referring to the incident, and stating that for the first time in history armed forces of Britain had marched in a Fourth of July parade on American soil, the president said: "It is my hope that in the future the armed forces of Great Britain and of the United States will march arm in arm in the long processes of peace."

President Harding touched upon an idea that many of the leaders of thought hold to be vital to the world's future. They are convinced that the world's security depends upon an understanding between the people who are of Anglo-Saxon descent. These peoples, despite the difference in the forms of government, have a common heritage. Their Magna Charta was wrung from a despotic monarch by peasants who were the daring champions of the rights of the people, and each new advance has been made possible through the splendid audacity of worthy descendants of these adventurous peasants.

With a viewpoint that is similar, and a democratic idealism, these two nations have more in common than any others of different nationality in the world today, and it is unfortunate that certain elements led by certain embittered partisans are intent upon hindering the growth of an Anglo-Saxon accord.

One thing stands out in the president's statement, and that is the conviction that armed forces must march arm in arm in the long processes of peace. In this there is a suggestion that peace will not come without the assumption of responsibility for its coming on the part of the nations that seek it. In its processes armed forces are to march together and it will be guaranteed by these forces. In this one sees a hint at the quite obvious fact that America must at some time take a part in policing the world if America would have an orderly world. Behind any court there must be power to enforce the decrees of the court and those who wish to have disputes settled by a court must be ready to contribute to the expenses of the court and to the officers who enforce the decisions of the court.

Sooner or later it will be borne in upon the American consciousness that the advantages of judicial decisions cannot be secured without the obligation of enforcing these decisions, and that those who are a party to the court must contribute to the forces that are required to enforce the will of the court. A court without a police force behind it might achieve results in an ideal world, in which it would not be needed, but in such a world as this judicial decisions are of little worth unless they are guaranteed by a force strong enough to make them effective in territories whose subjects are unwilling to obey. During the world war President Wilson expressed many principles that were universally right, before we became involved in it, but these principles carried little weight with Germany or with the Allied nations, and finally he was compelled to talk about the use of force—force that would be used to the uttermost. Theodore Roosevelt was not considered an idealist but he kept the peace and kept it, because behind any righteous decisions were the forces of the United States ready for action if necessary, and his announcement that unless certain conditions were met, "twenty-four hours from now Dewey sails" enforced a righteous decision without the use of force. President Roosevelt never used the forces of the United States, because their readiness made their use unnecessary. His unused forces ground the wheels of peace.

THE INDEPENDENT CHAUTAUQUA OF 1923

THE chautauqua of 1923 was enjoyed by many people but it did not attract those who had gone out to the lakes for the summer. Those who are wont to claim an interest in such programs were conspicuous by their absence and, as reports of the programs reach them, they will be impressed by the fact that they missed some of the best musical talent that has ever appeared in Brainerd.

The impressions of the 1923 chautauqua will help to guarantee the success of such entertainment in future years and the quality of this year's program bespeaks a more wide-spread interest in Brainerd's Independent Chautauqua. The experiment this year has proved that the chautauqua must meet the competition of the attractions offered by the surrounding lakes, but the character of the entertainment was such that it is highly probable that another year will find that the appeal of the program will succeed in outdoing even the attractions of the out-of-doors.

There is one thing that might help to make the chautauqua a greater success. Early July is quite near the beginning of the lake season, and the novelty that is renewed with each passing year, because of the long winter season, has not worn off. If the time of the chautauqua was fixed at a date later in the season it is probable that the appeal of the out-of-doors would have paled by that time and many more would come in from the lakes to enjoy the programs provided for a public that appreciates good, music, fine acting, and thoughtful lectures delivered with the ability that is born of experience on the lecture platform.

It is certain that all elements in the city, with those who leave the city for the summer to live at the lakes, should combine to make the independent, cooperative chautauqua a success. A city is benefitted by the inspiration that comes to it in the form of high class entertainment. The ambition of youth is stirred by the performances of the artistes, and the thought of people is stimulated by the messages of men who are in touch with movements that are of interest to the country at large, and who have many contacts with the public in various parts of the United States and quite often with peoples of foreign lands.

PROTECTING THE BABIES

ADULTERATING the foodstuffs of the people or introducing substances that are without food value for the purpose of gain is one of the meanest of all ways of making money. When ingredients are added to the larger content of a can or a bottle, that contains something that will be fed to children, and which, because it is robbed of food value, leaves the child without tissue building food those who practice such deception are responsible for the ill consequences upon the health of the children.

The state of Minnesota has determined that this practice must be stopped. The "filled milk" law passed by the last legislature and now effective penalizes those who substitute cocoanut oil for butterfat in milk offered to the public. Cocoanut oil is minus some of the vitamines that are present in butterfat, but because it is much cheaper than butterfat, it has been extensively used by those who have been selling canned milk. It could be introduced without affecting the appearance of the milk, and parents were likely to be deceived, and thinking that it contained the necessary properties, feed it to their infants, with the result that these did not receive the food which their parents believed that they were giving them.

This law will help dairy farmers by compelling the use of their products upon those who put up canned milk and it will guarantee that the canned milk bought in the state contains the vitamines that are supposed to go with milk.

It is a sad commentary on human nature that men are to be found who will deceive the parents of children, and cause them to offer "filled milk" to their children through ignorance of the fact that this milk is minus food qualities that are unbuilding, for the sake of gaining a few dollars at the expense of the health and vitality of the children of the state. The public would be pleased to see the fine waived in such cases and a jail sentence imposed upon those who continue to extract butterfat from milk and substitute for butterfat, which is rich in vitamines, the cheaper cocoanut oil which is of little food value.

A REPORTER of the New York News got into the steel mills as a laborer and his report shows that the steel mills are not good places in which to spend a vacation. It's too bad that he got in because he may lead the people to believe that the steel corporation isn't speaking the truth and that Judge Gary isn't the angel that he would appear to be.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S plan may find irreconcilables in Europe, who will block the program, just as irreconcilables over here blocked Woodrow Wilson's. It isn't easy to formulate a plan upon which everybody will agree. It's hard to find twenty men or women who agree on any one thing—what then of forty nations?

"HIKES" GROW IN POPULARITY

City People Every Day Becoming More Addicted to Long Walks Through the Country.

Days of the hike picnic are here. The hike picnic differs from the old-fashioned sedentary picnic in that the picnickers do not sit on the grass, but walk on it.

It is an entirely peripatetic social function, except when those who walk stop briefly for rest or luncheon.

These walking clubs now exist in cities all over the country. From the first one in Washington, they have multiplied greatly. New York city has hundreds of them, so that a whole page is devoted in some of the dailies to mapping out and describing "routes" in the nearby country.

Recently, in Kansas City, a walking excursion was advertised on a certain day, to which the invitation was general, and more than 1,000 excursionists were on hand on the bright and sunny morning with which the event was favored.

It might have suggested the beginning of Peter the Hermit's celebrated hike, although this time banners were neglected.

If hikes are to become one of the great outdoor diversions it may not be long until armies move down the country roads armed with sandwiches and tin drinking cups, filling the air with songs and conversational clamor of the populace.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

This law will help dairy farmers by compelling the use of their products upon those who put up canned milk and it will guarantee that the canned milk bought in the state contains the vitamines that are supposed to go with milk.

It is a sad commentary on human nature that men are to be found who will deceive the parents of children, and cause them to offer "filled milk" to their children through ignorance of the fact that this milk is minus food qualities that are unbuilding, for the sake of gaining a few dollars at the expense of the health and vitality of the children of the state. The public would be pleased to see the fine waived in such cases and a jail sentence imposed upon those who continue to extract butterfat from milk and substitute for butterfat, which is rich in vitamines, the cheaper cocoanut oil which is of little food value.

A REPORTER of the New York News got into the steel mills as a laborer and his report shows that the steel mills are not good places in which to spend a vacation. It's too bad that he got in because he may lead the people to believe that the steel corporation isn't speaking the truth and that Judge Gary isn't the angel that he would appear to be.

"HIKES" GROW IN POPULARITY

City People Every Day Becoming More Addicted to Long Walks Through the Country.

Days of the hike picnic are here. The hike picnic differs from the old-fashioned sedentary picnic in that the picnickers do not sit on the grass, but walk on it.

It is an entirely peripatetic social function, except when those who walk stop briefly for rest or luncheon.

These walking clubs now exist in cities all over the country. From the first one in Washington they have multiplied greatly. New York city has hundreds of them, so that a whole page is devoted in some of the dailies to mapping out and describing "routes" in the nearby country.

Recently, in Kansas City, a walking excursion was advertised on a certain day, to which the invitation was general, and more than 1,000 excursionists were on hand on the bright and sunny morning with which the event was favored.

It might have suggested the beginning of Peter the Hermit's celebrated hike, although this time banners were neglected.

If hikes are to become one of the great outdoor diversions it may not be long until armies move down the country roads armed with sandwiches and tin drinking cups, filling the air with songs and conversational clamor of the populace.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wide Open Frontier Towns in Minnesota 50 Years Ago

History of Brainerd a Book of Contrasts Between Modern City of Today and Gun and Gambling Times

Only the oldtimers in Minnesota, counting history from the territorial days prior to 1858, realize that even so recently as 50 years ago Minnesota still possessed a frontier, and knew towns that were typical of frontiers that flourished far earlier in the west. Some reminiscence of these days is preserved by Ingolf Dillan in "Brainerd's Half Century," from which pictures and extracts are here reproduced by permission of Mr. Dillan as holder of the copyright.

(Pictures and Story Reproduced by Courtesy Minneapolis Journal)

One upon a time, more than 50 years ago, the Northern Pacific railroad's builders were selecting a route in northern Minnesota, and came to the crossing of the Mississippi river. At Crow Wing, which was a trading post on the river's banks as early as 1837, Clem Beaulieu was overconfident. He felt the railroad just had to come there; that the survey farther north was just a bluff. And he set forth townsite terms to the railroad company. The terms didn't suit. The crossing farther north was chosen. That was in June, 1870.

Thus Brainerd was founded. Its site was determined by the railroad crossing of the river. At first it was known simply as "The Crossing," but later the village was given the maiden name of the wife of J. Gregory Smith, first president of the Northern Pacific. The townsite agent was Lyman P. White, Sr., and later he was president of the first village council and still later mayor of Brainerd. Thus he came to be known as "father of Brainerd."

After Fifty Years

Fifty years passed. Brainerd, grown to a city of 10,000 people, and justly proud of its 50 years, set out to celebrate its first half century. The whole community entered into the celebration; pioneers and men and women high in life who looked back lovingly to their earlier days in Brainerd, came to rejoice in reunion. And Ingolf Dillan, a native of Brainerd, who acted as secretary of the homecoming celebration, was fired with the thought that there was no complete printed history of the town.

Mr. Dillan is a graduate student and member of the faculty of the political science department in the University of Minnesota. His contacts gave him a different slant at history than is given to the commercial writers of "histories" of counties and towns who have gone up and down the state, selling "writeups" of more or less prominent citizens to be published in their so-called histories. Mr. Dillan got in touch with Solon J. Buck, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical society, and got some pointers on history writing. He gathered together the data that came out of the Brainerd half-century celebration, and he dug into old records and publications. The result is "Brainerd's Half Century," a handsome volume of 144 pages, containing 140 pictures of old time and recent scenes and events, together with pictures of pioneers.

The Historian

Ingolf Dillan, member of the faculty of the political science department, University of Minnesota, and a native of Brainerd, wrote "Brainerd's Half Century" and dedicated it to his parents.

Preserving Traditions

It was no small task, getting this book together. Its author does not present it, even now, as the work of a historian. But he has "tried to present facts according to their relative importance and interest." Solon J. Buck says he has done well. And moreover, he has contrived to get into the pages the human interest, the romance of pioneering, the humor as well as the hardships, and with it all, the historical data as best he could verify his statements.

"Brainerd's Half Century" begins with the beginnings of the region's history. It shows that as Brainerd straddles the river, it has undergone more than 20 changes of jurisdiction, in the various national ownerships, among Spain, France, Great Britain and the United States, the latter including even Virginia. It was "sometime late in the summer of 1870," writes Mr. Dillan, that "the tune of ax on pine blended with the song of birds and proclaimed the birth of Brainerd."

It Was a Wide Open Town

Brainerd in the early '70s was a wide open little town. "The character of the population," says this book, "may be judged from the fact that according to a tabulation in the Brainerd Tribune of Feb. 22, 1873, the city had 21 stores, 18 hotels and public boarding houses, and 15 saloons. Obviously a large percentage of the new inhabitants were unmarried men and whose home was the boarding house and whose club the saloon. As might be expected, many adventurers, gamblers and other undesirables came to Brainerd to ply their trades. The light from the kerosene lamps of the saloons shone through the uncurtained windows an invitation to enter, drink and be merry. Hundreds of railroad workers and builders accepted the hospitality of the barkeeper and gambler." But this was not uncommon to the time and locale. "Even the most critical," the book goes on, "will admit that Brainerd was no worse than many other frontier towns, and better than some. Although some shooting took place, there was less than might be expected under the prevailing conditions. The families who came here set there hearts upon making Brainerd a city of homes, properly protected by a public conscience. This fact finds ample proof in the early establishment of city government, the dedication of several churches, the organization of educational and protective units. Most of the folks were jolly, goodnatured, funloving people, in search of home and fortune, but not missing a good time in the process."

Contrasted With Today

"Brainerd's Half Century" is a book of contrasts. It pictures the thriving city of today, with development fully up to the times—and it takes the reader back to frontier days. Of these another picture is given in quotation from a traveler who wrote in 1872:

"The principal street of the town, a long row of everlasting wooden fronts, peculiar to western railroad towns, and hiding cheaper and poorer structures behind, was flaming with illuminated signs and devices advertising stores, saloons and gambling places indiscriminately and all of which seemed to be doing a thriving business, the arrival of the company's pay car in town during the afternoon doubtless having something to do with the busy aspect of the place in the evening.

"The most conspicuous and evidently the "highest toned" of the numerous sporting establishments on the streets sailed under the name of the 'Dolly Varden club,' and desirous of seeing all the life on the frontier I took personal observations of the place, its patrons and mode of business. The building was a rough wooden affair, whitewashed inside, and the ground strewn thickly with sawdust in lieu of a floor. No attempt of concealment or diversion was made, but the gambling was carried on in full view of the street and every passerby. The first room, entered directly from the street, was perhaps 40 feet long by 20 wide, and ranged around this at intervals were the tables where various games were played. A cotton rag, bearing in red paint the name of the game going on beneath it, was affixed to the wall above each table. The gages were all of the cheaper and commoner sort—'chuck-a-luck,' high dice and 'mustang.'

"In the rear of this large hall was a smaller room where the more aristocratic games were dispensed, and where only the true royal tiger may be met and conquered—if you have the luck. The faro and the rouge-et-noir tables are well patronized, and a crowd of eager spectators throng each group of players."

When the Gun Spat

Another reminiscense of old Brainerd, listing business places, gave these among others of the town: "Charlie Wilson had a grocery store and saloon where the Hayes block is. Jack O'Neil, who shot 'Faker George' in 1877, kept the 'Last Turn' saloon. Judge Conant lived where the postoffice is, and G. W. Holland boarded there. J. L. Stalcher kept a grocery store on Laurel street. Ed French had a saloon, Le Bon Ton, where the Lively garage is. Farnham and Lovejoy had a little sawmill on Boom lake. L. P. White, father o' Brainerd, was agent for the Puget Sound company, selling real estate."

The first house in Brainerd, says the Dillan book, was built of round logs by Charles Darby. The first regular hotel was conducted by Mrs. Sarah Chapman, and the book contains a picture of Mrs. Chapman. The first sawmill, in 1872, was near the railroad bridge, and was owned originally by Barrows, Prescott & Bassett. Brainerd was to be in the heart of the lumber industry, in its time; this first mill had a capacity of 50,000 feet of lumber, 80,000 shingles, 25,000 lath, in a day. The first newspaper was the Brainerd Tribune by M. C. Russell, and it was the first newspaper on the Northern Pacific, east of the Rockies. The population of the city in 1873 was estimated at 1,500, about 40 per cent of whom were more or less transient.

One may go through the pages of this book and come upon pictures of the Headquarters hotel and the old N. P. depot in 1872, and pages of history that linked Brainerd and the Northern Pacific which made it.

Brainerd was the general headquarters of the railroad, with general office building and shops. The Headquarters hotel had 50 or 60 sleeping rooms, a dining room seating 100, water piped to all the rooms from an overhead reservoir, an icehouse, refrigerator rooms, "a great many chimneys and over 600 joints of stovepipe." The panic of 1873 halted work on the railroad. Hard times followed. The offices were moved to St. Paul, and J. M. Hannaford, then a clerk in Brainerd was promoted. He kept on going up, until he reached the presidency and then the chairmanship of the board.

It was late in 1877 when Brainerd threw from its railroad beginnings, then died down, and boomed again on logs and lumber, and when sawmilling passed, turned to iron mining and agriculture—always coming out on top, and cherishing the traditions and aiming at the ideals of those "good natured, fun loving people in search of home and fortune, but not missing a good time in the process."

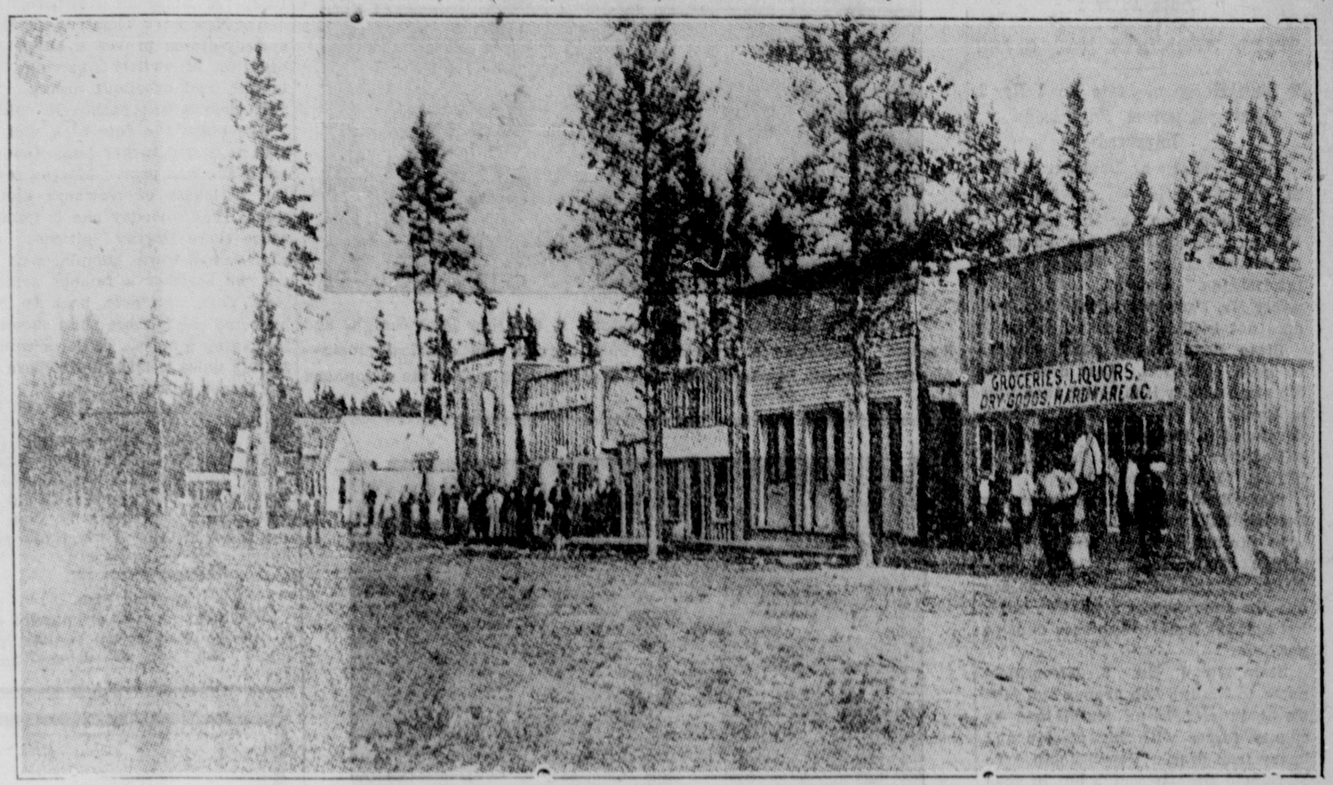

When Lumbering Flourished

There is a chapter, too, on Brainerd's logging days, when it was one of the chief points in the woods, when the sawmills gave work to hundreds of men, and other hundreds of lumberjacks worked with ax in the pineries. The pioneers, says Mr. Dillan, "regarded the immense forests as inexhaustible," and he quotes from a publication of 1899: "The amount already cut over in the last 18 years seems not to have lessened the supply, and when, if ever, the pine shall begin to fail, the supply of hardwood exists in vast and inexhaustible quantities. There is enough timber in this country for domestic use to last for ages to come." Yes, the old logging days are over; the huge loads of logs, the great sawmills that once made Brainerd resound with the song of the saw, are shut down. A paper mill has succeeded the sawmills, and is Brainerd's second industry.

But though railroad and logging glories engrossed Brainerd and its country roundabout for years, and the woods were largely merely pineries, now Crow Wing county and northern Minnesota are coming into their own as regions of agriculture, and the Dillan book gives some chapters to that phase of Brainerd's stability. Next to this is the iron mining, and the history of the Cuyuna range is told—named, it is declared, for Cuyler Adams and his dog, Una.

The second half of the book is given over to stories of the semi-centennial celebration, and a roster of Brainerd pioneers closes the book. It is a history and a compilation of reminiscence about a city that first dose of law was enforcement of the Sunday closing ordinance. Thereupon the council sought to repeal it, but the president, J. R. Pegg, refused to put the repeal to vote. Resignation of the editor-mayor was followed by a special election at which "a certain element, partly in fun, nominated an odd jobs man in no wise qualified, and he was elected. Friends supplied him with stovepipe hat, white shirt, broadcloth suit and drinks. He took office. But his mayoralty was marked by a long series of obstructive tactics by the council, which led to his impeachment for refusing to enforce the dog ordinance. Finally, Brainerd appealed to the legislature, which revoked the city charter, and Brainerd went under township government for five years.

"In the rear of this large hall was a smaller room where the more aristocratic games were dispensed, and where only the true royal tiger may be met and conquered—if you have the luck. The faro and the rouge-et-noir tables are well patronized, and a crowd of eager spectators throng each group of players."

When the Gun Spat

Another reminiscense of old Brainerd, listing business places, gave these among others of the town: "Charlie Wilson had a grocery store and saloon where the Hayes block is. Jack O'Neil, who shot 'Faker George' in 1877, kept the 'Last Turn' saloon. Judge Conant lived where the postoffice is, and G. W. Holland boarded there. J. L. Starcher kept a grocery store on Laurel street, Ed French had a saloon, Le Bon Ton, where the Lively garage is. Farnham and Lovejoy had a little sawmill on Boom lake. L. P. White, father o' Brainerd, was agent for the Puget Sound company, selling real estate."

The first house in Brainerd, says the Dillan book, was built of round logs by Charles Darby. The first regular hotel was conducted by Mrs. Sarah Chapman, and the book contains a picture of Mrs. Chapman. The first sawmill, in 1872, was near the railroad bridge, and was owned originally by Barrows, Prescott & Bassett. Brainerd was to be in the heart of the lumber industry, in its time; this first mill had a capacity of 50,000 feet of lumber, 80,000 shingles, 25,000 lath, in a day. The first newspaper was the Brainerd Tribune by M. C. Russell, and it was the first newspaper on the Northern Pacific, east of the Rockies. The population of the city in 1873 was estimated at 1,500, about 40 per cent of whom were more or less transient.

One may go through the pages of this book and come upon pictures of the Headquarters hotel and the old N. P. depot in 1872, and pages of history that linked Brainerd and the Northern Pacific which made it.

Brainerd was the general headquarters of the railroad, with general office building and shops. The Headquarters hotel had 50 or 60 sleeping rooms, a dining room seating 100, water piped to all the rooms from an overhead reservoir, an icehouse, refrigerator rooms, "a great many chimneys and over 600 joints of stovepipe." The panic of 1873 halted work on the railroad. Hard times followed. The offices were moved to St. Paul, and J. M. Hannaford, then a clerk in Brainerd was promoted. He kept on going up, until he reached the presidency and then the chairmanship of the board.

It was late in 1877 when Brainerd throve from its railroad beginnings, then died down, and boomed again on logs and lumber, and when sawmilling passed, turned to iron mining and agriculture—always coming out on top, and cherishing the traditions and aiming at the ideals of those "good natured, fun loving people in search of home and fortune, but not missing a good time in the process."

When Lumbering Flourished

There is a chapter, too, on Brainerd's logging days, when it was one of the chief points in the woods, when the sawmills gave work to hundreds of men, and other hundreds of lumberjacks worked with ax in the pineries. The pioneers, says Mr. Dillan, "regarded the immense forests as inexhaustible," and he quotes from a publication of 1899: "The amount already cut over in the last 18 years seems not to have lessened the supply, and when, if ever, the pine shall begin to fail, the supply of hardwood exists in vast and inexhaustible quantities. There is enough timber in this country for domestic use to last for ages to come." Yes, the old logging days are over; the huge loads of logs, the great sawmills that once made Brainerd resound with the song of the saw, are shut down. A paper mill has succeeded the sawmills, and is Brainerd's second industry.

But though railroad and logging glories engrossed Brainerd and its country roundabout for years, and the woods were largely merely pineries, now Crow Wing county and northern Minnesota are coming into their own as regions of agriculture, and the Dillan book gives some chapters to that phase of Brainerd's stability. Next to this is the iron mining, and the history of the Cuyuna range is told—named, it is declared, for Cuyler Adams and his dog, Una.

The second half of the book is given over to stories of the semi-centennial celebration, and a roster of Brainerd pioneers closes the book. It is a history and a compilation of reminiscence about a city that first dose of law was enforcement of the Sunday closing ordinance. Thereupon the council sought to repeal it, but the president, J. R. Pegg, refused to put the repeal to vote. Resignation of the editor-mayor was followed by a special election at which "a certain element, partly in fun, nominated an odd jobs man in no wise qualified, and he was elected. Friends supplied him with stovepipe hat, white shirt, broadcloth suit and drinks. He took office. But his mayoralty was marked by a long series of obstructive tactics by the council, which led to his impeachment for refusing to enforce the dog ordinance. Finally, Brainerd appealed to the legislature, which revoked the city charter, and Brainerd went under township government for five years.

County Highway Engineer Murphy Gives Out Information For Auto Drivers

STATE HIGHWAYS NOT GIVEN

2 Sink Holes on State Road No. 1 Being Repaired, No. 2 to be Improved

County Highway Engineer Walter M. Murphy gives out the following road information for the benefit of Brainerd people who are planning automobile trips on Sunday. This information concerns only roads under Mr. Murphy's jurisdiction, and does not include state highways.

State Road No. 1. (13th street) In good condition. Last section to Morrison county line better than first section. Two sinkholes which developed in the spring are being repaired, one with drains the other by billing. Both are passable.

State Road No. 2. (Also known as Dewing Highway, running east and west through southern tier of townships.) Maintained in good condition, narrow in places. Plans are out for improvements on this road, but nothing definite has been done as yet.

State Road No. 3. (Merrifield north to Emily) Ash avenue and Mill street in city being maintained by county forces with big tractor and heavy iron drag. Very smooth. To Merrifield slightly rough but in good condition considering the fact that this road has not been surfaced since it was built in 1915. Merrifield north to Ossipi, good, thence north to Watertown line to the end of new construction, excellent, being worked at present. Balance o fold road to Emily, good.

State Road No. 4 (Crosby to Emily) Crosby to Mississippi river good. New bridge being built here, but travel is over old structure. Next 3½ miles good, well dragged and graveled. Detour 2½ miles to Watertown line, balance of way to Emily, fine. Emily north to Cass county line, very good.

State Road No. 5. (Deerwood, Bay lake and south) New construction from Deerwood to Bay lake, good, from Bay lake to Flint corner where road meets state highway No. 18, has been smothed and is in good condition.

All white line roads in the county are being maintained and in general are in good shape. The sand roads in the northern part of the county are in better shape than the heavier highways in the southern section since the recent heavy rains.

Paul and Phil were twins. One morning aunty approached and Paul blithely reminded: "Don't forget this is my birthday!" "Mine, too!" chimed in Phil. "No, it's only mine," stoutly maintained Paul. "I'm not going to divide my birthday. Other kids have a whole birthday all to theirselves!" "Well," calmly adjusted Phil, "you can have your birthdays in the mornings and I'll have mine in the afternoons."

Viola Dana's New Picture Her Best

Aided by the best screen vehicle she has ever had, dainty little Viola Dana provides the most delightful entertainment we have ever seen in many a day in her new Metro picture, "A Noise in Newboro," now at the New Park Theatre. This new comedy-drama proves a happy combination of swiftly moving plot, laughs, and excellent acting, with just enough fine pathos to spice it.

She plays the role of a girl who was neglected in her home town because she was poor. Martha resents the littleness of Newboro and resolves that someday she is going to rouse these worthy citizens from their small-town complacency. After she becomes a famous artist in New York, she goes back to Newboro and she is more than successful in making a noise. What a wonderful big noise it is! And Newboro will not forget it soon.

Sometimes It Pays

Sometimes it pays to go to a bank and borrow money. Sometimes borrowing money is the wisest and most profitable thing in the world to do.

But bankers never employed the slogan, "It pays to borrow."

Rather, they counsel carefully with a man before they advise him to borrow—for his own safety, as well as their own. They do not promote borrowing as something practically sure of success.

Perhaps that is one reason why bankers have never understood the expression, "It pays to advertise."

Advertising sometimes pays, just as borrowing sometimes pays, just as investment sometimes pays, just as manufacturing sometimes pays.

Advertising is not the sum of all the economic laws. The man who uses advertising must have a different conception of it than as something that is sure to pay.

That is what advertising agencies are for—to keep men from believing things about advertising that are not true.

With Brain Perforated, Lyndale Man Lingered 69 Hours Before Succumbing

Leonard Fredolf Winquist died Friday afternoon at a local hospital from the results of a self-inflicted gun-shot through the brain, while camping at Pequot July 3rd. The bullet lodged in his brain and he lingered 69 hours before death relieved his sufferings.

Deceased is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Winquist of Lyndale, Minnesota. He lived with his parents on a farm near this city, and was in the northern part of the state in an effort to regain his health when he took his life. He was 24 years of age, and unmarried.

The remains are being held at the Whitney chapel pending the arrival of his parents Sunday. It is expected that burial will be made at Lyndale.

JULIUS DEERING NAMED AGENT

Will Handle Holland Furnace Company Products in Brainerd

Julius Deering has been appointed by the Holland Furnace Co., of Holland, Mich., as its agent for their products in Brainerd.

This appointment carries no little weight, when it is considered that the Holland company has three hundred such branches throughout the country, all of them in larger cities than ours. The company is always careful in selecting its agencies, and in chosing Brainerd exhibits its confidence in the city.

It is Mr. Deering's intention to give a very thorough service with these furnaces. Cooperating with the purchaser, special engineers will plan the heating system for each individual need, either in homes already built or in the process of erection.

The company's interest does not lag when the furnace is once installed, but continues throughout the life of the plant, thus giving satisfaction to the user and making friends for the Holland.

Two types of furnace are put out by this company. The "Holland" is a pipe system, with registers in each room, and is built along new principles of heating. The "Ottawa" is a pipeless furnace for those who prefer this method of heating.

Mr. Deering will have further announcement to make in the near future, concerning this product and the service he is prepared to give on it.

Fulton (aged three years, eleven months, listening to the phonograph)—Daddy, I think soft music is yellow.

Dr. P. (his father, a distinguished chemist)—Yellow? And what color is loud music?

Fulton—Well, it is black.

Dr. P.—And what is blue music like?

Fulton—Blue music is loud, but not so loud as the black music.

Dr. P.—Tell me, why is soft music yellow?

Fulton (after thinking a moment)—Well, when you mark with yellow crayon on paper, you can't see it very well, but when you mark with black you can.

"BRAINERD'S HALF CENTURY"

Dillan's Book Discusses City's Development from Beginning to the Present Day

MAKES AN ACCEPTABLE GIFT

Contains 144 Pages and 140 Excellent Pictures and Has a Sewed Binding

"Brainerd's Half Century" takes in Brainerd history from the very earliest times, along its many lines of development, railroad, lumbering, social life, buildings, schools, churches, business etc., gives an illustrated acount of the Home Coming celebration; gives lists of pioneers, old settlers and service men.

It contains 144 pages and 140 excellent pictures. It is bound in heavy double Damascan, and is a sewed binding, not wire staples. This is a larger book than first promised, but its price, $2, remains the same. Orders may be mailed to Box 178 or telephone 174. Deliveries of the advance orders are now being made.

"Brainerd's Half Century" will grow more valuable as the years pass by, and it makes a very acceptable gift.

Dr. Solon J. Buck, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society and a professor of history in the University of Minnesota, commenting on the book, wrote Mr. Dillan:

"I have just completed an examination of your book entitled Brainerd's Half Century, and it strikes me as a unique and interesting publication; the old photographs which you have assembled and reproduced are especially interesting. I think the people of Brainerd are to be congratulated on having an account of the community's history and of its semi-centennial home-coming preserved in such an attractive form."

Tim Brady, of Brainerd, wrote that in looking the book over his mind went back to those pioneer days with a deep feeling of affection for those stalwart and rugged men who were then his associates. The most of them were now at rest in Evergreen cemetery. He congratulated the author on the good work done and its accuracy.

Col C. D. Johnson wrote the author that he had perused the book and was much pleased with it. He said: "I congratulate you on having the patience and taken the time to compile Brainerd's valuable history. It is a book of great interest to us old timers and the younger generation of Brainerd can certainly find in it much of interest to them."

J. M. Quinn of Nisswa wrote that he thought the book just fine. "Your descriptions and history of the early Brainerd are absolutely correct as I remember it in 1873. Just fifty years ago this fall. I have a tender feeling for the Brainerd of long ago and I congratulate you on the issue of this nice book."

E. G. Roth, County Agent, said he was well pleased with its contents and the method in which the information was presented. Each item was presented clearly, briefly and in language that can be understood by all. He could not resist the temptation of reading his copy immediately.

George D. LaBar wrote: "I am highly pleased with the results of the earnest efforts that you have put forth to present something that would be a credit to yourself and the City of Brainerd, and I have every reason to believe that the subscribers will be more than satisfied."

Dr. Joseph Nicholson wrote: "This is certainly a fine lay-out and well taken care of. You deserve all the comments that have been said for you. I hear nothing but well of it.

A. C. Ebert wrote the author: "I am in receipt of your book, Brainerd's Half Century and am very well pleased with it, it is very well gotten up. I didn't have a chance to read everything, just glanced through it casually and sent it on to Mr. Palmer, president of the S. G. Palmer Company, Minneapolis.

I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Palmer this morning stating that he was very well pleased with the book and that he thinks a book of this kind is of a great value to Brainerd and he also says it is very well gotten up. In looking through it he says there are a number of old names that are familiar to him and particularly the name of Mr. Bly, who opened up one of the first stores in Brainerd, and he had the pleasure of selling Mr. Bly a lot of stuff. Mr. Bly had a contract with the N. P. when they were doing their construction in this part of the country.

I hope the distribution on this book goes over big because you certainly are entitled to good support."

Deceased is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Winquist of Lyndale, Minnesota. He lived with his parents on a farm near this city, and was in the northern part of the state in an effort to regain his health when he took his life. He was 24 years of age, and unmarried.

JULIUS DEERING NAMED AGENT

Will Handle Holland Furnace Company Products in Brainerd

Julius Deering has been appointed by the Holland Furnace Co., of Holland, Mich., as its agent for their products in Brainerd.

This appointment carries no little weight, when it is considered that the Holland company has three hundred such branches throughout the country, all of them in larger cities than ours. The company is always careful in selecting its agencies, and in chosing Brainerd exhibits its confidence in the city.

It is Mr. Deering's intention to give a very thorough service with these furnaces. Cooperating with the purchaser, special engineers will plan the heating system for each individual need, either in homes already built or in the process of erection.

The company's interest does not lag when the furnace is once installed, but continues throughout the life of the plant, thus giving satisfaction to the user and making friends for the Holland.

Two types of furnace are put out by this company. The "Holland" is a pipe system, with registers in each room, and is built along new principles of heating. The "Ottawa" is a pipeless furnace for those who prefer this method of heating.

Mr. Deering will have further announcement to make in the near future, concerning this product and the service he is prepared to give on it.

ASSOCIATE SOUND AND COLOR

Both Children and Adults, Frequently Unconsciously, Link the Two in Their Minds.

Mr. Horace B. English sends an account of the following interesting incident to Science Magazine. It seems to indicate the manner in which children, and many adults as well, come to associate sounds with colors.

Fulton (aged three years, eleven months, listening to the phonograph), —Daddy, I think soft music is yellow.

Dr. P. (his father, a distinguished chemist)—Yellow? And what color is loud music?

Fulton—Well, it is black.

Dr. P.—And what is blue music like?

Fulton—Blue music is loud, but not so loud as the black music.

Dr. P.—Tell me, why is soft music yellow?

Fulton (after thinking a moment)—Well, when you mark with yellow crayon on paper, you can't see it very well, but when you mark with black you can.

"BRAINERD'S HALF CENTURY"

Dillan's Book Discusses City's Development from Beginning to the Present Day

MAKES AN ACCEPTABLE GIFT

Contains 144 Pages and 140 Excellent Pictures and Has a Sewed Binding

"Brainerd's Half Century" takes in Brainerd history from the very earliest times, along its many lines of development, railroad, lumbering, social life, buildings, schools, churches, business etc., gives an illustrated acount of the Home Coming celebration; gives lists of pioneers, old settlers and service men.

It contains 144 pages and 140 excellent pictures. It is bound in heavy double Damascan, and is a sewed binding, not wire staples. This is a larger book than first promised, but its price, $2, remains the same. Orders may be mailed to Box 178 or telephone 174. Deliveries of the advance orders are now being made.

"Brainerd's Half Century" will grow more valuable as the years pass by, and it makes a very acceptable gift.

Dr. Solon J. Buck, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society and a professor of history in the University of Minnesota, commenting on the book, wrote Mr. Dillan:

"I have just completed an examination of your book entitled Brainerd's Half Century, and it strikes me as a unique and interesting publication; the old photographs which you have assembled and reproduced are especially interesting. I think the people of Brainerd are to be congratulated on having an account of the community's history and of its semi-centennial home-coming preserved in such an attractive form."

Tim Brady, of Brainerd, wrote that in looking the book over his mind went back to those pioneer days with a deep feeling of affection for those stalwart and rugged men who were then his associates. The most of them were now at rest in Evergreen cemetery. He congratulated the author on the good work done and its accuracy.

Col C. D. Johnson wrote the author that he had perused the book and was much pleased with it. He said: "I congratulate you on having the patience and taken the time to compile Brainerd's valuable history. It is a book of great interest to us old timers and the younger generation of Brainerd can certainly find in it much of interest to them."

J. M. Quinn of Nisswa wrote that he thought the book just fine. "Your descriptions and history of the early Brainerd are absolutely correct as I remember it in 1873. Just fifty years ago this fall. I have a tender feeling for the Brainerd of long ago and I congratulate you on the issue of this nice book."

E. G. Roth, County Agent, said he was well pleased with its contents and the method in which the information was presented. Each item was presented clearly, briefly and in language that can be understood by all. He could not resist the temptation of reading his copy immediately.

George D. LaBar wrote: "I am highly pleased with the results of the earnest efforts that you have put forth to present something that would be a credit to yourself and the City of Brainerd, and I have every reason to believe that the subscribers will be more than satisfied."

Dr. Joseph Nicholson wrote: "This is certainly a fine lay-out and well taken care of. You deserve all the comments that have been said for you. I hear nothing but well of it.

A. C. Ebert wrote the author: "I am in receipt of your book, Brainerd's Half Century and am very well pleased with it, it is very well gotten up. I didn't have a chance to read everything, just glanced through it casually and sent it on to Mr. Palmer, president of the S. G. Palmer Company, Minneapolis.

I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Palmer this morning stating that he was very well pleased with the book and that he thinks a book of this kind is of a great value to Brainerd and he also says it is very well gotten up. OLD ATHLETES STILL HAVE A KICK LEFT

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, July 7.—It's getting to be a compliment instead of an insult to call anyone an old man nowadays.

Since Jess Willard did his one act sketch entitled, "The Comeback," by knocking out Floyd Johnson for the benefit of the Milk Fund and Jess Willard, it seems as if all the old men in the universe are rising up against youth.

Just a few days ago old "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, 52 years old, spat a yard of tobacco juice into a hotel cuspidor out at Dubuque and decided he would pitch a four-hit game and win it from the Marshalltown club of the Mississippi Valley League 1 to 0.

It's been twenty years or more since the "Iron Man" was the idol of New York fandom. They still talk about him in the Bowery saloons and mention his sacred name in the same fragrant breath with Steve Brodie. But the young fans had forgotten him. They heard of him only as some vague character who did more for baseball in New York than any other with the exception of John McGraw and Christie Mathewson. They thought surely he was dead.

McGinnity, it seems, is managing the Dubuque club in a minor league and still is contributing his share in the battle to establish the ultimate supremacy of age over youth.

Then, of course, Fred Merkle is only batting .472 in his first twenty-seven games in the International League. Merkle—the same man who failed to touch second in a game that meant the world series some years ago, but who touched every pitcher in the league for more than his share of base hits many seasons.

Long ago the steam went out of Joe McGinnity's arm. Long ago the springs were rusted in Fred Merkle's legs. But McGinnity has lost none of his cunning, and Merkle has nothing wrong with his batting eye.

Both were forced out of fast company because hey had slowed up and were getting too old.

There are dozens of men in the smaller leagues who are conquering the inevitable depreciations of age and can still walk up to the plate and sock a baseball as good as anyone or curve them around the corners with the best.

WHEN BACK HURTS FLUSH OUT KIDNEYS

Drink Lots of Good Water All Day, Also Take Salts Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water — you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

(By United Press)

Mimbledon, Eng., July 7.— The finals of the All-England tennis tournament, in which two Americans, Francis T. Hunter and William M. Johnson, fight it out for the singles chmapionship, got under way this afternoon.

A warm sun beat down on the center court as the play began. A huge crowd was packed into the stands.

Wimbledon, Eng., July 7. — Wm. Winmbledon, Eng., July 7.—Wm. M. Johnston, California tennis star, added another championship to his string here this afternoon when he easily defeated Francis T. Hunter, another American, in the final singles match of the All-England tourney.

Winning the first two at love, "Little Bill" has no serious opposition.

ABOUT "IN-LAWS"

One Reason Why Some Marriages Are Unhappy.

Frequently Only the Most Trivial Causes for Antagonism Between "Alfred" and "Her" Mother.

One reason why so many marriages turn out unhappily is because the average married man and the average mother-in-law are not in sympathy.

Some mothers-in-law and sons-in-law are in a state of continual antagonism. It seems peculiar that a man should fervently love Mrs. A's daughter and at the same time cordially dislike Mrs. A. Yet that is quite an ordinary position, declares a writer for London Answers.

Would it not be infinitely better if sons-in-law and mothers-in-law were on friendly terms? Obviously, yes. Why, then, is there this friction and antagonism?

Is it not because the average prospective son-in-law has been influenced by the many silly stories he has heard about mothers-in-law and their alleged awful ways, and his judgment warped by the scores of libelous jokes made at the expense of those much-maligned ladies?

Thus it is that he is prejudiced and very possibly before he has seen his sweetheart's mother, and certainly before he really knows her he adopts the traditional antagonistic attitude.

And she—well, her attitude is critical.

That is not to be condemned, and is no justification for the line he takes. She has every right, with her daughter's happiness in the balance, to look with critical eyes at the young man who can make or mar that happiness.

Another cause of friction is his air of proprietorship over Muriel. Just because he is her accepted suitor, and in due course will be her husband, he resents any attempt on the part of her mother to exercise any authority, be it ever so mild, over her.

He assumes possession, in short, before the law has given him any real right.

He takes Muriel out and brings her home late—at 11 instead of 10, or the like. Her mother protests, and Alfred—let us give him a name—is up in arms at once. He talks of hurrying the marriage on, so that his darling Muriel may be relieved from her mother's hard rule.

And just at this period Muriel is so much in love that she sides with Alfred. Later, when she is married, and realizes, possibly for the first time, all that her mother was to her, there is a big reaction.

She "won't have dear mother criticized"; she "won't hear a word against her." And mother "shall come and stay as long as she likes." So, a row, and the little rift within the lute.

And thus it is that Muriel's mother "doesn't think much of him."

The unfortunate result is that the antagonism becomes mutual, and Alfred, who had originally no reason whatever for adopting the anti-mother-in-law position, has now been presented with one. True, he made it himself, but—

All this should be changed. The Alfreds should take pains to get round their mothers-in-law. It would make courting easier, the wedding more pleasant, and the married life afterward infinitely happier. It can hardly be expected that Muriel should like his mother if he declines to like hers.

WIT NOT FORCED

Dublin Car Driver Famed for Power of Repartee.

Probably Able to Boast, If He Would, That He Never Found Himself at a Loss.

Pat Dickinson is a well-known character in Dublin, where he is very popular, the Christian Science Monitor relates. His car is always clean and comfortable, and he has a particularly fine horse, but Pat himself is the chief attraction. He is bubbling over with genuine fun and wit. It is true that he somewhat startled an English friend of mine last year. She had enjoyed the drive in the Phoenix park so much that wishing to be sure of being able to engage him again, she asked him his name. As she was writing it down he exclaimed suddenly, "Oh, please to stop, ma'am; sure you're putting out me eye!" She had written Dickenson instead of Dickinson. On their way to the park they saw a baker's boy drop his basket of loaves, and Pat immediately called out, "It's glad I do be to see that bread's down in these hard times."

As they were passing the Four Courts my friend asked him what that fine building was. Pat drew up his horse, and accosted a barrister, who, in wig and gown was standing at the entrance. "Would your honor be so kind as to tell this fair lady what this fine building is?"

"Why, you rogue, you know as well as I do that it's the Four Courts."

"To be sure, your honor, and so it is, but I thought I'd like to have counsel's opinion free for once."

"Pat," said my friend, who is a brunette, "might you not better have called me a dark lady?"

"Not at all, ma'am," was his quick answer; "sure and don't you be my fare."

He told her that his father was a farmer in Tipperary. "One day," he said, "he was driving a cow before him from the market, when up comes a cycle agent, and, ses he, 'Hallo, me man, and what did you give for that cow?' '£20,' ses me father. '£20! just think of the grand bicycle you could have had for half that!' 'All very good,' ses me father, 'but it did be a cow I was wanting, and not a bicycle.' 'Yes, but just think what a fool you'd look going through the street, trying to ride a cow!' 'Arrah thin, not half the fool I'd look goin' through the streets, tryin' to milk a bicycle!'

"Another day, me father caught a tramp, runnin' off with one of his best hens. 'Drop that this minit,' ses he. 'Oh, sir,' ses the tramp, 'sure I only did be takin' it for a lark.' 'Indeed thin,' ses me father, 'but it's the uncommonly bad judge of poultry ye do be.'"

When Pat's fare was bidding him goodby, she gave him an extra half crown for his "good company." "No, thank you, ma'am," he said; "sure and didn't you give me your company free?"

OLD ATHLETES STILL HAVE A KICK LEFT

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, July 7.—It's going to be a compliment instead of an insult to call anyone an old man nowadays.

Since Jess Willard did his one act sketch entitled, "The Comeback," by knocking out Floyd Johnson for the benefit of the Milk Fund and Jess Willard, it seems as if all the old men in the universe are rising up against youth.

Just a few days ago old "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, 52 years old, spat a yard of tobacco juice into a hotel cuspidor out at Dubuque and decided he would pitch a four-hit game and win it from the Marshalltown club of the Mississippi Valley League 1 to 0.

It's been twenty years or more since the "Iron Man" was the idol of New York fandom. They still talk about him in the Bowery saloons and mention his sacred name in the same fragrant breath with Steve Brodie. But the young fans had forgotten him. They heard of him only as some vague character who did more for baseball in New York than any other with the exception of John McGraw and Christie Mathewson. They thought surely he was dead.

McGinnity, it seems, is managing the Dubuque club in a minor league and still is contributing his share in the battle to establish the ultimate supremacy of age over youth.

Then, of course, Fred Merkle is only batting .472 in his first twenty-seven games in the International League. Merkle—the same man who failed to touch second in a game that meant the world series some years ago, but who touched every pitcher in the league for more than his share of base hits many seasons.

Long ago the steam went out of Joe McGinnity's arm. Long ago the springs were rusted in Fred Merkle's legs. But McGinnity has lost none of his cunning, and Merkle has nothing wrong with his batting eye.

Both were forced out of fast company because hey had slowed up and were getting too old.

There are dozens of men in the smaller leagues who are conquering the inevitable depreciations of age and can still walk up to the plate and sock a baseball as good as anyone or curve them around the corners with the best.

WHEN BACK HURTS FLUSH OUT KIDNEYS

Drink Lots of Good Water All Day, Also Take Salts Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water — you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

"One day," he said, "he was driving a cow before him from the market, when up comes a cycle agent, and, ses he, 'Hallo, me man, and what did you give for that cow?' '£20,' ses me father. '£20! just think of the grand bicycle you could have had for half that!' 'All very good,' ses me father, 'but it did be a cow I was wanting, and not a bicycle.' 'Yes, but just think what a fool you'd look going through the street, trying to ride a cow!' 'Arrah thin, not half the fool I'd look goin' through the streets, tryin' to milk a bicycle!'

"Another day, me father caught a tramp, runnin' off with one of his best hens. 'Drop that this minit,' ses he. 'Oh, sir,' ses the tramp, 'sure I only did be takin' it for a lark.' 'Indeed thin,' ses me father, 'but it's the uncommonly bad judge of poultry ye do be.'"

When Pat's fare was bidding him goodby, she gave him an extra half crown for his "good company." "No, thank you, ma'am," he said; "sure and didn't you give me your company free?"
